

SANDING RULES

The intention of all E.P.A. and marina yard rules in regard to sanding is to guarantee that no dust or paint chips get onto the ground anywhere at anytime!

All sanding on exterior surfaces of your boat must be done using a vacuum sanding system. Absolutely no wet sanding and no dry sanding by hand is allowed in the boatyard. No exceptions.

The marina rents vacuum sanding systems for daily use, otherwise you may use your own—but it must be up to E.P.A. standards:

All vacuum sanders must be at least 5HP and 12-gallon capacity with a yard-approved bag and filter. It is imperative that a member of the marina staff inspects your system before use in this yard. Since all vacuum bags are not created equal, we must inspect the interior of your vacuum sander to make sure the vacuum bag is capable of processing fine dust particles. This pertains to the filter as well.

If the sanding process is not 99% dust free, you must hang plastic to enclose your working area and contain your debris. Then, if excess debris is accumulating on your tarp, you must clean it up periodically during the day to prevent it from being tracked from the tarp onto the ground around your boat. Also, debris is subject to dispersal by wind and rain. Please guard against that possibility.

All debris (paint dust and paint chips) must be removed from the tarp under your boat every day before you depart the boatyard. If this is not done, you run the risk of having yard personnel clean up your area for a fee of $75/hour.

When cleaning up your area, please put all debris into plastic bags or other closed containers prior to disposal in the garbage cans. Whenever possible, please use your vacuum sander to remove debris from the tarp. Remaining residue can be removed by sweeping.

Never change vacuum sanding bags in the yard! The marina staff will change marina-owned machines after they have been returned to the office, whereas customer-owned machines must be changed off the premises. No debris-ridden bags from customer-owned machines can be disposed of in the boatyard.
